Title: CSOSA

The DC Department of Corrections (DCDOC) has been one of the pioneers of restorative justice in the United States. DCDOC continues this role with the application of restorative principles to their reentry program. A basic component of this effort is to modify DC's reparative board model to organize community volunteers more effectively for participation in restorative justice panels. A restorative justice panel consists of community volunteers who meet with offenders reentering society. Community members provide advice and support for offenders on reentry. Dr. Willa A. Butler provides us with what's on the horizon for the organization as well.

Title: Hexagon

In November 1955, a group of young Washingtonians who had been active in college theatre got together to put on a show of their own. Charles Ilsley, who had appeared in several all-male Princeton Triangle productions, suggested a similar show devoted to "pure fun and nonsense." Hexagon has grown dramatically over the years. It now has nearly 350 members and performs 17 times during the month of March before an audience totaling more than 14,000 people. Its broad civic mission—using theatrical arts as a vehicle for improving the lives of others within the community.

Title: Howard Theater Restoration

The Howard Theatre opened 100 years ago this year, and was once one of the most important music venues in the city—it hosted performances from Duke Ellington and Roberta Flack and the mainstays of go-go. Housing Complex reported yesterday that the restoration of the Shaw venue, closed since the '80s, will be underway by late August. And from the looks of it, the organization behind the theater's "rebirth," the Ellis Development Group, has some serious ambitions. Ellis' plan for the property has three arms: a medium-sized stage and seating for 500-600 patrons, upscale food and beverage services to "complement a destination entertainment experience," and community-use spaces such as classrooms and recording studios. According to the plan, the Howard will be symbiotic but not competitive with the other stars in the constellation of Washington theatres, focusing on music while other facilities, like the nearby Lincoln Theatre on U Street, will have "different but aligned missions."

Fostering Hope

Shane Salter noticed a significant absence of services and support for abused and neglected children nationally. His years of growing up in foster care, then becoming a teen dad and single parent, re-marrying and adopting special needs children, guided him through twenty years of reforming child welfare and ultimately one unanswered question; how can we curb the cyclical process of children moving in and out of foster homes and the juvenile justice system? After seeing the same solutions packaged differently and getting the same results, he took a look at the National CASA model established in 1976 and chartered a course to transform children's lives one day at a time. Just recently Shane authored a new book entitled "Fostering Hope." The book focuses on the hardships Shane encountered throughout his life and how he overcame those challenges.

Title: First Robotics

FRC combines the excitement of sport with the rigors of science and technology. Under strict rules, limited resources, and time limits, teams of 25 students or more are challenged to raise funds, design team/brand/teamwork skills, and build and program robots to perform prescribed tasks against a field of competitors. It's as close to real-world engineering as a student can get. Volunteer professional mentors lend their time and talents to guide each team. The mission statement of First Robotics is simple. To inspire young people to be science and technology leaders, by engaging them in exciting mentor-based programs that build science, engineering and technology skills, that inspire innovation, and that foster well-grounded life capabilities including self-confidence, communication, and leadership.

Title: Drunk Driving/Impaired Driving

During the holiday season many people gather for holiday parties during which, alcohol maybe consumed. Now police in Maryland plan to crack down on drunk drivers. In Maryland, operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs is a criminal offense. This offense may be prosecuted with or without any direct evidence of a person's BAC. The determining factor is whether a person's ability to drive has been impaired. During the interview we learn that if you're caught drinking and driving, you will be detained by the police and read your rights, your vehicle will be towed at your expense and you will be kept in a police lock-up until you are bailed out. Corporal Rose adds that they will set up numerous checkpoints throughout the state in an effort to crack down on drunk drivers.

Blacks In Government® (BIG) was established in 1975 and incorporated in 1976 by a small group of African Americans at the Public Health Services which is a part of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in the Parklawn building in Rockville, Maryland. The organization was viewed as essential to the Black civil service employee, based on a wide assortment of racially motivated problems faced by the HEW Black employees in Rockville. Initially, it was thought that the umbrella organization would address only the problems at the Federal level. However, it was soon determined that State, County, and Municipal Black employees were faced with the same general of employment problems. Nonetheless, Blacks In Government was organized in 1975 and incorporated as a non-profit organization under the District of Columbia jurisdiction in 1976.

The Office of Tax and Revenue (OTR) is a part of the Office of the Chief Financial Officer for the District of Columbia. OTR's mission is to collect the proper amount of tax due to the District of Columbia and correctly account for all revenues, while minimizing the burden on taxpayers and the cost to the government.

During the interview we learn the following:

1. Customer service must come first.

Our goals are to provide first-rate customer service, easy access to data when needed, and a proactive outreach program that informs taxpayers about their liabilities. To accomplish this, we will provide taxpayers with clear, timely information on their tax obligations, will give taxpayers multiple ways to file their returns and pay taxes due, and will provide expedient resolution of account matters.

2. The District's revenue stream must be protected and enhanced.

Finding the most effective, least costly way to ensure that taxpayers file tax returns accurately and pay liabilities timely is crucial to protecting the District of Columbia's tax revenue stream.

Therefore, OTR will encourage voluntary compliance, identify instances of non-compliance - such as failing to file, reporting assessments inaccurately, or paying liabilities tardily - and use appropriate enforcement action when necessary.

3. Financial integrity and accountability must be incorporated into tax administration.

Prompt deposit of remittances, correct posting of taxpayer accounts, and diligent maintenance of the District's overall revenue accounts are essential to financing the city's operations. In order to warrant public confidence in the tax system, it is critical that OTR exhibit a high level of personal and organizational integrity.
